

I think the big loser in media consolidation is the consumer - with so few people controlling what is available for people to watch/read/listen to there is no way that citizens are well served. At the rate we're going, we aren't even being entertained anymore. Radio stations playing the 35 songs over and over is sucking the life out of my stereo.